Tracking Footprints of the Hound

Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts flocked to the official opening of the Footprints of the Hound exhibit on Friday, October 19 in the Canada Trust Gallery at the Toronto Reference Library. The exhibit features pages from Arthur Conan Doyle's original manuscript of The Hound of the Baskervilles, as well as a striking display of rare magazines, posters, illustrations, advertisements and family photographs.

On until December 2, this tribute to the author and his detective Sherlock Holmes celebrates the centenary of the publication of The Hound of the Baskervilles and also marks the 30th anniversary of the founding of Toronto Public Library's Arthur Conan Doyle Collection.

The launch featured the dedication and naming of Sherlock Holmes Walk, Toronto's newest walkway located directly east of the Toronto Reference Library. City Librarian Josephine Bryant said of the walkway, "this is a wonderful way for the library to welcome library visitors and Sherlock Holmes fans from Toronto and around the world."

Approved by City

Council, the naming of the walkway came about thanks to the efforts of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, the Bootmakers, which is Toronto's own Sherlock Holmes Society, Councillor Kyle Rae and Brian Hall, City of Toronto Works and Emergency Services.

Toronto's recent history

What were Torontonians protesting with the sit-ins at Rochdale College during the 1960s? How did they react to the extension of the Spadina Expressway in the 1970s? Now you can find these details and much more in the Special Collections Department of the Toronto Reference Library. It has acquired The Alan and Thomas Suddon Collection, consisting of over 5,000 pieces of broadsides, and printed ephemera documenting political, cultural and social events in Toronto from the 1950s to the 1990s.

Alan Suddon, the former head of the Fine Art Department of the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library, was an avid collector. The library is especially pleased to receive the collection of posters, broadsides, and flyers, as they document community and social events in Toronto generally, and more specifically in the neighbourhood of the Annex.

Word on the Street

Thousands of festival-goers dropped by Toronto Public Library's booth at Word on the Street on Sunday, September 30, which was geared to promoting its web services. It showcased a live demonstration of the Virtual Reference Library and an electronic exhibit of Historicity: Toronto Then and Now, the latest in a series of VRL gateways. Using powerful search engines, the public can use Historicity to find interesting historical facts about the people, events, neighbourhoods and historic buildings of old Toronto (www.tpl.toronto.on.ca).

All the World's a Page Public Library Week

Paul Hoffer, founder of the band Lighthouse and author of the Bagel Effect and All Together Now, spoke about thriving in the digital age at the Toronto Reference Library on Wednesday, October 17. His presentation was one of several events during Public Library Week, October 15-22, as Toronto Public Library celebrated its electronic resources, and invited patrons to listen to the experts talk about the changing digital world.

Since 1985, the public library community has designated the third week in October as Ontario Public Library Week. It offers an opportunity for libraries across the province to showcase their new programs, services and service delivery. About six million of Ontario's 11 million residents have a library card, and in Toronto more than 1.2 million or about 52 per cent of the city's population are library members.

More and more patrons are looking for Internet-based electronic information services, access around the clock, and the ability to get answers from librarians without coming into the library. More than 38 per cent of the holds placed in the first half of this year were placed remotely as compared to 28 per cent last year at this time. Virtual visits to TPL web pages, the Virtual Reference Library and gateways have increased 70 per cent compared to this time last year, and of all visits to web databases, 42 per cent originate remotely.

Bradshaw & Company shine

The second season of the Performing Arts Lecture Series opened with a bang at the Toronto Reference Library on Friday, September 28 with Richard Bradshaw, Canadian Opera Company's General Director and acclaimed conductor. Bradshaw presented a lecture about his reflections on an outstanding career to a rapt audience of about 250 people. After a question and answer session, two young singers, Andrea Ludwig and Olivier Laquerre of the Canadian Opera Company Ensemble and their accompanist, pianist Steven Philcox, dazzled the audience with a short concert of operatic arias. Audience members summed up the event well:

"It was especially delightful to hear of Mr. Bradshaw's background. What a raconteur! The young singers were a pleasure."

"This is my first lecture at this location. I had not realized you have a large performing arts section."

Looking for young artists

Toronto kids can show off their artistic talents by entering the Design-a-Bookmark Contest at any branch library across the city or the library's bookmobiles. Open to children in three age groups (up to 6, 7-9 and 10-13 years), the contest kicks off Canadian Children's Book Week on Saturday, November 3 and closes on Saturday, December 15.

Children are invited to pick up a contest entry form at their local library, and create original bookmark artwork using as many colours as they wish. Entries will be judged on theme, originality and design, and winners will be selected at each library.

Winners in each age group at every library location will receive a book prize. The 16 grand prize winners will each receive a backpack filled with Laurentien colouring products and a personal supply of their winning bookmark, which will be published and distributed throughout the 98 library locations.

Toronto Public Library thanks Laurentien for supporting this year's contest.
