TORONTO PUBLIC LIBRARY NEWS AND VIEWS

VOLUME 1 • NUMBER 5 • SEPTEMBER 2001

Toronto Public Library staff training "rovers" helped library patrons learn to use the Internet and other electronic resources through a Young Canada Works grant.

Back-to-school initiatives expanded

The kids are back at school and Toronto Public Library is there for them, backing the Get Caught Reading campaign, resuming its Sunday service and enhancing electronic services.

Spearheaded by the Canadian Publishers' Council, Get Caught Reading is a nation-wide reading awareness campaign to encourage people to visit their local libraries and sign up for library cards. On September 22, visitors in the city library branches who got caught reading took home t-shirts as mementos.

"We work really hard to make sure people get the best reading experience—whatever it is for them," says City Librarian Josephine Bryant, "so we were delighted to participate in this awareness effort."

Sunday hours began at 27 locations across the city on September 9. These locations open from 1:30 to 5 p.m. on Sunday throughout the school year.

As well, back-to-school, back-to-work library users will have 600 new computers with high-speed Internet access in branches throughout the city.

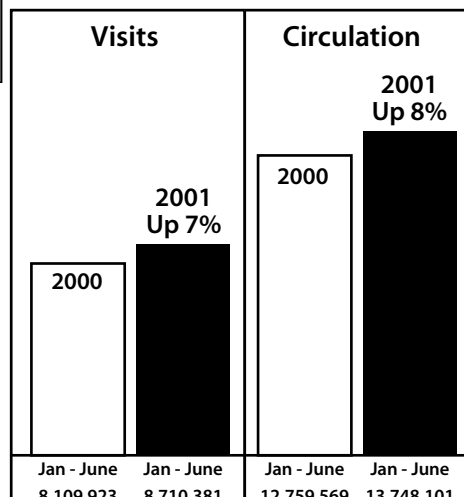

"This is terrific for customers using the Internet, our many online information sources, and the library catalogue," says Bryant.

Jump in library activity

The busiest library in North America just got busier. Toronto Public Library circulated a million more books and other items in the first half of 2001. That's an increase of eight per cent compared to the first six months of last year— enough books to pave a path from Ottawa to Toronto.

As well, based on the June 2001 monthly report on use, over 600,000 more visits were made to the library, up by more than seven per cent in the first six months compared to this time last year.

The number of holds for library items increased by 25 per cent.

A place for all seasons

The weather wasn't the only great thing about summer in Toronto this year. Toronto Public Library had a slate of programs and activities that attracted residents and visitors of all ages.

"We are committed to developing information literacy skills in children to give them greater opportunity to explore, learn and grow in the new digital world." - City Librarian Josephine Bryant

Summer Sleuth

In late June, schools throughout the city distributed TD Summer Reading Club invitations for Summer Sleuth, the Library's inventive reading program that attracted children to the joys of reading. Almost 50,000 kids attended meetings of the club in person or logged on to the Library's Summer Sleuth website.

Kids@computers

Library staff delivered computer training to nearly 500 Toronto kids at nine locations through the City's kids@computers program, which placed 246 computers into Toronto homes.

Toronto Public Library partnered with Toronto Social Services to develop Kids@computers, providing free training and equipment to children whose families are on social assistance. The children completed courses on basic computer skills, Web awareness (including sessions for parents) and using the Internet to help with homework.

The program will continue at the Albion and Agincourt branches this fall.

Leading to Reading

Now that the kids are back at school, the Library's Fall Leading to Reading and Homework Help programs are up and running. These programs have expanded from 24 to 34 locations this fall. Their message to kids in Grades 2 to 6 is: "reading is for you" and "reading is wonderful."

This summer, more than 1,400 children took part in Leading to Reading, with attendance in some branches jumping by 20 to 30 per cent over last year.

English Can Be Fun

More than 500 Canadian newcomer children, ages 9 to 12, attended the English Can Be Fun programs at 18 locations (up from 12 last year because of popular demand) this summer. English Can Be Fun gives children a chance to practice speaking English, to make friends, to get a library card, and to get a first hand, inside look at all the library has to offer.

Your United Way donation

Did you know that you can direct your United Way donation to the Toronto Public Library Foundation? All proceeds will benefit the Library's Leading to Reading program. Last year the Foundation raised $180,000 to support children's literacy. This year our goal is $240,000. Help us achieve this goal. The Toronto Public Library's charitable registration number is 886554476RR0001. You can allocate your entire donation to the Library or just a portion. You specify the amount. We would love to be able to recognize and personally thank you for your donation. Please contact Liza Fernandes at 416-393-7123 if you have any questions.

Local youngsters joined Councillor Peter Milczyn and City Librarian Josephine Bryant as they cut the ribbon during Eatonville's official opening on September 13.

Eatonville a hit with community

The new Eatonville Branch circulated a record 3,200 items on June 4, its first day open. That's 1,000 more items than daily circulation before the branch closed.

Surveys show that, compared to 1999, Eatonville now has:

- 25% more customers visiting
- 46% more questions being answered
- 84% more materials being used in the library

"These figures show just how pleased people are with this beautiful new branch and its improved facilities and programs," says City Librarian Josephine Bryant.

Libraries in public's good books

Canadians rate public libraries as one of the best performing public or private institutions, surpassed only by fire departments, according to the Citizens First 2000 study.

The Institute of Public Administration of Canada (IPAC) commissioned the in-depth study of Canadians' views of government services. It is a sequel to one done in 1998 by the federal government's Canadian Centre for Management Development, which found equally high ratings of public library services. Historicity: Toronto Then and Now

Pictures • Maps • Historical Records • Neighbourhoods
A Library Web Service www.tpl.toronto.on.ca

Want to know more about a beautiful old building in Toronto? Need details about your neighbourhood's past for a school assignment?

Historicity, a new library web service, is a great way to start!

Historicity: Toronto Then and Now brings together on the Internet many sources of information about Toronto past and present, including thousands of photos, paintings, drawings and maps of early Toronto; historical city directories; local history publications; and links to useful Internet sites about the city.

The library gratefully acknowledges the support of the Government of Canada's Millennium Partnership Program, toronto.com, Torstar Media Group and The McLean Foundation.

Gala Luncheon for Literacy

A second gala luncheon is planned, after the success of last year's Toronto Public Library Foundation A Novel Afternoon, which featured Harry Potter author J.K. Rowling. It will honour the recipients of the first annual Toronto Public Library Celebrates Reading award.

Slated for Sunday, October 14 at the Barbara Frum Atrium, CBC Broadcasting Centre, it will feature authors, entertainers, and a silent auction. All proceeds will benefit the Library's literacy programs. Tickets are $300 for individuals and $4,000 for corporate tables. Please call Karen Fleming at 416-397-5924 for ticket sales and other details.
